The Austin-based frontman, songwriter and guitar aficionado Andy Macintyre announces his new EP, Melomania. Andy approached Grammy-nominated mixing engineer Tim Palmer (Pearl Jam, U2, Tears for Fears, Blue October) with a batch of demo songs and was ecstatic to have Tim work with him on this new project. Recording at Wire Recording studio with Stuart Sullivan (Sublime, Meat Puppets, Jimmie Vaughan) and Eric Harrison at Studio 601 (MGMT, Capital Cities, Jason Isbell), Andy captured what he feels is the best album of his career.

For this new EP, Andy decided to take what he loved about rock and the blues and turn it upside down to create his own unique "genre-bending" sound. Working with fellow rockers Jacqui Walker, Lauren Silva, and Texas guitar legend Van Wilks, Andy has put together a release that is set to bring a unique spin on rock & roll.

"Andy's got a style that's definitely rooted in the blues, [but] he can sway into the rock category, he can sway into the country category, and not everybody can do that," said Kris Krishna (management for Gary Clark Jr.). "He's definitely one of those guys you either got it or you don't and he's one of those guys that got it."

"This dude can play a mean Stratocaster," said Gary Clark Jr. "I realized that I needed to go practice, after meeting this dude."

"Andy has a unique voice, said Tim Palmer. "I don't think he sounds like anyone else... and I believe there are really strong songs on this album [EP]."
